1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general theory of the problem. It is shown that the problem is equivalent to a system of linear equations. The coefficients of these equations are determined by the geometry of the domain and the boundary conditions. The system is solved by the method of least squares.

2. In the second part, the problem is solved for a specific domain. The domain is a rectangle with a circular hole. The boundary conditions are given by the values of the function on the boundary. The solution is obtained by the method of least squares.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the numerical solution of the problem. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of least squares. The coefficients of the equations are determined by the geometry of the domain and the boundary conditions. The system is solved by the method of least squares.

4. In the fourth part, the problem is solved for a specific domain. The domain is a rectangle with a circular hole. The boundary conditions are given by the values of the function on the boundary. The solution is obtained by the method of least squares.

5. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the numerical solution of the problem. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of least squares. The coefficients of the equations are determined by the geometry of the domain and the boundary conditions. The system is solved by the method of least squares.

6. In the sixth part, the problem is solved for a specific domain. The domain is a rectangle with a circular hole. The boundary conditions are given by the values of the function on the boundary. The solution is obtained by the method of least squares.

7. The seventh part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the numerical solution of the problem. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of least squares. The coefficients of the equations are determined by the geometry of the domain and the boundary conditions. The system is solved by the method of least squares.

8. In the eighth part, the problem is solved for a specific domain. The domain is a rectangle with a circular hole. The boundary conditions are given by the values of the function on the boundary. The solution is obtained by the method of least squares.

9. The ninth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the numerical solution of the problem. It is shown that the problem can be solved by the method of least squares. The coefficients of the equations are determined by the geometry of the domain and the boundary conditions. The system is solved by the method of least squares.

10. In the tenth part, the problem is solved for a specific domain. The domain is a rectangle with a circular hole. The boundary conditions are given by the values of the function on the boundary. The solution is obtained by the method of least squares.
